HER LOTTERY TICKET.
(A Story from the French.)
Old Landry was a thin, shriveled up little man, very rich, and so parsimonious that people said he could shave an egg.

Since the death of his wife he had lived all alone in a tiny house in his native village. We say "alone," although he had an old servant with him, but Brigitte was of small account, a little more valuable than the dog, perhaps, but less than the donkey, for that cost forty crowns. She had entered the Landry family as cow-girl when only twelve years old, and had remained there ever since, and was a simple, honest soul, with a boundless admiration for "the master." He did not hesitate to turn to good account her blind, dog-like devotion, and as a consequence, Brigitte's savings were not large, though her duties were arduous.

"You are a good old fool," he would sometimes say to her, by way of recompense for her ceaseless industry, and then her wide mouth would expand slowly in a delighted grin, which displayed her toothless gums as she exclaimed admiringly: "Master loves to make a little joke!" One day, the miser thought he could save a mason's bill by repairing a broken wall at the side of a pond, but while he was at work, his foot happened to slip and he fell into the water just where it was most deep. He went floundering about for a minute or two calling for help at the top of his voice, but no one heard him, and his strength being exhausted, he was about to sink for the third time when Brigitte caught sight of him, and leaping into the pond at the risk of her own life she succeeded after desperate efforts, in bringing him to land. The old man was unconscious, but Brigitte took him under her arm as if he were a bundle of straw, carried him home, and rubbed him so vigorously that animation was restored. When he opened his eyes the good creature shed tears of joy, and he had the delicacy not to mention the fact of her having neglected to save his trowel which he had dropped in the water, and which was a great loss, being quite new; on the contrary, he exclaimed in a burst of grateful generosity:

"You saved my life, and I shall not forget it, I shall give you a present, Brigitte."

True to his word, the next day he called her to him and after some hesitation drew out his long leather purse from his pocket, and then with as much effort as if he were pulling a tooth, he took out a coin and handed it to her.

"Twenty cents," he said, "over and above your wages, Brigitte; you understand, this is not to be deducted, it is a present. Now do not spend it foolishly. You can buy a lottery-ticket with it, and perhaps you will win a hundred thousand francs!"

It was the first time in his life that he had been so generous, and he could not forget it, but seemed to take a tender interest in the fate of his twenty-cent piece. Again and again he asked the old woman whether she had bought the ticket.

"Not yet, master," was her answer every time he asked, but one day she replied to his usual inquiry:

"Yes, master, I have bought it."

"What number is it?" he said.

"Number thirty-four."

"Take care that you do not lose the ticket, I will look it up in my closet for you if you like."

"Oh, no, master, I will not lose it."

After the excitement matters resumed their usual course in old Landry's house, plenty of work and very little food continuing to fall to Brigitte's share. The miser was beginning to forget his own prodigality in rewarding the servant, when one day, at the barber's shop, where he had stopped in, as usual, to read the newspaper without buying it, he caught sight of a paragraph which gave him a terrific shock. It was the result of the drawing of the lottery, and one line stood out in flaming figures which nearly dazzled him.

Number 34 wins the Grand Prize of 100,000 francs!

be married as soon as possible, you and I," he said.

After the chicken and pork and wine, Brigitte thought she was prepared for anything, but this was too much.

"You are joking," she gasped in terror, but the other hastened to explain that he was growing old and had no relations, no friends, and he did not want to die all alone like a dog; besides that he was not ungrateful, confound it! And Brigitte had saved his life. He could not forget that.

The banns were published immediately, and the wedding took place to the great delight of the whole village. Then the strange pair returned to their home, where a new servant engaged in Brigitte's place, awaited them. They had hardly got inside the house when the bridegroom asked merrily:

"My dear, where did you hide your ticket?"

"What ticket?" said the bride, taking off her spectacles and looking wonderingly at the speaker.

"Why the lottery-ticket, No. 34, which you bought with my twenty cents."

"Oh husband!" cried the old woman, "how you frothed about that ticket! I wanted to please you, but lotteries are no good."

"Have you lost it?" he gasped.

"I never had it to lose, for I bought it with the money!" replied Brigitte quietly: "the weather was so cold, and I am very fond of saunas."

MORGANTOWN NOTES.
Items of Interest from the Seat of the State University.

MORGANTOWN, March 4.—Last night Prof. P. B. Reynolds, of the university, delivered the fourth lecture of the Excelsior lecture course in the Presbyterian church. This is the only lecture of the course in which local talent was represented, but it was not behind any in point of merit.

For several years there has been a rule of the board of regents requiring students to attend religious exercises at least once on Sunday, and requiring regular attendance at chapel. For some reason this rule has not been very closely observed by the students for some time past and the faculty has been lenient in the enforcement of the rule. It is rumored that at the last meeting of the faculty it was decided that in the future the rule will be enforced to a much greater extent than in the past.

E. R. Stewart, of this county, was the successful candidate in the competitive examination for appointment to the United States military academy at West Point. The examination was held at Piedmont by Congressman Wilson, and there was quite a number of applicants.

Mr. Charles E. Jolliffe, who has for several years been connected with the First National Bank here, was recently elected cashier of the new bank just established at Mannington. Mr. Jolliffe is a young man of excellent business qualifications and merits the position.

Plumbers and gas fitters have just come from Wheeling and commenced work fitting up the new court house here. The external work on the building is now all completed and the tiling for the fireproof floor is almost all laid. The contractor promises to have the building completed by June.

The Pastor Shoots the Deacon.
BIRMINGHAM, ALA., March 4.—Rev. John Calvin, a Methodist preacher in Green county, this morning shot and killed William Herdic, a deacon in the church, and fatally wounded David Smith, brother-in-law of Herdic. Herdic suspected Calvin of being intimate with Herdic's wife and attacked him with a cane, when Calvin drew his pistol and fired five shots with the above result. Calvin is in jail at Eutaw.

"When I was a young man," said Jonathan Gray.
"If I follow took physic he knew it, you bet. It would whip him all up in a cockle way. And, good Lord, what a twist his insides would go!"

But the pills in use now-days by sensible folks are as easy to take and as pleasant as jokes.

Of course the kind referred to by Mr. Gray was Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the very best liver pill ever made—mild, but sure and effective. The only pills sold by druggists, absolutely or trial! Satisfaction guaranteed, or your money is returned.

Vile and Unworthy
Of consideration are nostrums of which it is asserted—and there are many such—that they cure immediately bodily ailments of long standing. There are none such that can. Chronic disorders cannot be instantaneously removed. Continuity in the use of a genuine medicine, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will eradicate chronic physical evils. Not the least of these last in the force of its opposition to medicine is constipation, to the removal of which, if possible, the Bitters is particularly adapted. Constipation of the bowels is a complaint which can be dealt with early and systematically. So are its usual attendants, liver complaint and dyspepsia. For these, for malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble, and more recently "la grippe," this highly and professionally commended medicine is an undoubted specific. Nothing can exceed it, moreover, as a means of imparting strength to the feeble and nervous.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

New York, March 4.—Money on call easy at 15/64 per cent; last loan 2 per cent; closed offered at 4 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 4 1/2 per cent. Sterling exchange quiet but steady at 84 3/4 @ 85 1/4. Sales of stocks $14,499 shares.

The stock market to-day was again very active, and after the first hour was decidedly strong, although one group of stocks monopolized the attention of traders and the lion's share of the improvement in prices. The general list, however, presented a firm front throughout the day despite the early weakness. The trading as a whole did not lose its professional character, but was more alive to the dealings, and while the late advances may have been largely due to the freight arising from the shorts by the unusual advances in the Vanderbilt, the buying was undoubtedly of a good character, and the improvement was more substantial in other stocks than the leaders. Richmond and West Points are still suffering from the uncertainty in the reorganization. The stocks to-day, however, were comparatively strong. Later in the day the feature of the day's operations was developed, and the Vanderbilts quickly came to the front with Lake Shore in the lead, Michigan Central following, and the industry quite neglected in the late dealings, and St. Paul crossed 80 once more, while Northwestern, with the Vanderbilt, showed a marked rise. The coal stocks were weak and the industrial quite neglected. The market closed strong and confident on a large volume of business. The greatest advances included Lake Shore 7 1/4, Michigan Central 1 1/2, Northwestern, Canada Southern and St. Paul 1 1/4, Rock Island 1 1/4, Richmond and West Point 1 1/4 per cent.

Railway bonds more animated. Sales $5,109,000. Government and state bonds dull and firm.
